

Innovative treatment option for cataracts

Tuesday, August 7

Each year more than 2 million Americans undergo cataract surgery to remove an aging, cloudy eye lens. With traditional cataract surgery, only distance or near vision—not both—could be restored, leaving patients dependent on glasses or contact lenses.

Now there's an advanced new alternative—the Crystalens—that goes one step further, fixing cataracts and also restoring your ability to see things clearly up close, at a distance, and anywhere in-between. Come hear a board-certified ophthalmologist describe this latest treatment option.
